FRUIT EXPORT.

Every year the commerce of the world increases not only in quantity but in variety. A century ago our ancestors were content with the food productions of their own lands. Very few agricultural products were exchanged, and those were invariably of the kinds which stood long sea voyages.

With the introduction of steam navigation all these things have changed. It is possible to-day, in Europe to furnish a feast fit for a prince and everything on the table of foreign product brought over fresh. Fruit, vegetables, meat, fish, poultry, go to England from North and South America, Africa and even Australia. Steamers on all the great ocean lines are fitted up with patent ventilating and refrigerating apparatus, so that even after a voyage of 11,000 miles, vegetable and animal productions are as fresh as they were on the day they were put aboard the ship. But what avail is it to us, if the rest of the world is progressing, and we are left behind. Even in the comparatively short voyage of 7 days between here and San Francisco, fruit cannot be kept in good condition for want of these scientific checks to decay. And yet it would assuredly pay both shippers and ship-owners to provide special appliances for the better preservation of fruit during the voyage. A good price is already given here for bananas for export, and yet, we are informed, the shipper has to allow for a margin of 25 per cent. of bunches that will be worthless on arrival. That is to say he can buy 100 bunches here, at what is considered a fair price, and sell only 75 of them on the coast and still make a profit.

So that if proper appliances were placed on our steamers for ventilating and refrigerating cargoes of fruit, the shippers, and through them the country at large, would receive the value of the other 25 bunches now lost to everybody. Our fruit trade would receive an impetus and gradually we should have the growth of other fruits encouraged. Our remarks too, will apply to the other side of the question, the importation of fruit here. Numerous complaints have reached us, from time to time, of the poor quality and bad condition of the fruit imported here. We feel certain that there is a sufficiently numerous class on these islands who can afford to pay good prices for good fruit; and this ought to encourage shippers to make an effort and arrange with ship-owners and get these desirable reforms inaugurated.

At the head of the Amazonian army in Babil & Bifou, now running at the London Alhambra, is a girl called Marion, who, since the time when in January, 1866, she first saw the light at Benkendorf, a village near the Thuringian mountains, Germany, has crept up and up until she has attained the remarkable height of eight feet two inches, and is, it is said, still growing.

Shipping Notes.

The tern Hera will probably be discharged by to-morrow night, and will then take in ballast and sail for Puget Sound.

The bark Edward May will leave for Hongkong to-morrow.

The bark E. L. Pettingill sails for San Francisco the end of the week.

The Cristoforo Colombo will leave for Yokohama about Friday.

The steamer Anjer Head leaves for Hongkong after finishing taking in coal.

English Gossip.

ANOTHER TEMPERANCE VICTORY.

—A Berkshire clergyman has announced his resolve to substitute zoeodone for wine in the sacrament.

Mrs. Langtry, the professional beauty of England, is now starring in a theatrical troupe round the English provincial towns. She makes over $7,000 a week.

Cetewayo is in all probability in England by this time, being feasted by the leading English towns. The Prince of Wales has also arranged to receive him. The Mayor of Leeds is reported to have said that it would be well to persuade Cetewayo of the advantage of woollen clothes.

CAPT. ROPER is "full" on newspapers and reporters, so he says.

The merchants are praying for rain to lay the dust.

An unusually bright rainbow was visible behind Punchbowl yesterday at 5 p.m.

At Mr. E. P. Adams' sale yesterday fair prices were obtained. Everything was sold, except the monster bronze vases. There is still a chance for anyone who has $500 to spend.

A little incident of the bombardment of Alexandria will interest many readers of newspapers more than the bombardment itself. It is the fact, related in one of the dispatches, that by means of a telephone the bombardment was distinctly heard at Malta, one thousand miles from the scene of action.

THE passages of the Hotel have been furnished with new carpets and mats, and all the rooms have had four coats of oil paint. What with the carpets and the painting, anyone passing along the corridors will notice the light and airy effect of the decorations. The bar has also been fitted up in good style.

THE town is full of rumors on the aspects of the political situation. Every one has either a fresh story or an enlargement of some previous one.

THE Suez may be hourly expected: probably the Egyptian pilikia will be more unravelled in the news she will bring.

YESTERDAY we were shown an elegant testimonial, in the shape of an illuminated address, prepared for presentation to Mr. James Campbell by the Library and Reading Room Association, as a recognition of his generosity in granting the use of the building, free of charge, occupied by the Association for the Loan Exhibition. We understand the testimonial was engrossed in the office of Mr. J. E. Wiseman. It reflects great credit on the designer.

J. W. ROBERTSON & Co. have received from the photographer, Rev. S. H. Davis of Christ Church, South Kona, specimens of views of Kealahakea Bay and Kaawaloa, Hawaii, the place where Capt. Cook was killed. These are to be sold for the benefit of the endowment fund of the above church, which may be considered as a memorial church to Capt. Cook.

We were shown yesterday an extremely creditable piece of work by a native Hawaiian—John L. Rees. It is as gorgeous a specimen of book-binding as any one would wish to see. It is now on exhibition at J. W. Robertson & Co.'s.

ONE drunk and one assault and battery at the Police Court yesterday.

An inquest was held yesterday on the body of C. F. Nolte, aged 10 years. The verdict returned was: Came by his death by accidentally jumping from the cars when in motion, and the locomotive going partly over his body. The coroner made a statement to the engine-driver, which we think is worthy of our readers' attention: Now, if you whip the boys to make them get off the cars the parents will not blame, but rather, praise you.

THE moderate drinkers are getting frightened over the new liquor bill as discussed in Saturday's P. O. A. Amongst the remarks made are that one of the provisions of the new act is a shield for the sly-grog sellers as the only person who could inform, that is the purchaser from him, is liable to the same penalty as the unlicensed vender. The second point is that, in no case will any person be able to get a small quantity of liquor to keep in his own house, say a bottle at a time, and therefore greater drinking will be done both at home and in saloons. [We can assure our readers, on the highest authority, that the impressions conveyed in the editorial referred to above, in regard to selling by the single bottle to be drunk on or off the premises, are entirely erroneous; that the law stands in the new Act just as it does at present, no change having been made.—Ed.]

POLICE COURT.—On Tuesday two cases of drunkenness were each fined in the usual sum. A case of assault by a Chinaman on a native boy was then called, Chinaman fined $5 and $3:10 costs. Assault by a kanaka on a Chinaman; the Chinaman sold him a melon, and after eating it the kanaka said he had no money: the pake dunned him for several days, and at last when he received his money he got an extra donation of a slap in the face: kanaka fined $5 and $3 costs. Larceny of a box of dried fish: the prisoner pleaded guilty and threw himself on the mercy of the court. The court, in its mercy, sentenced him to two months' imprisonment with hard labor.

DR. CREVAUX, the French explorer, was celebrated in the world of science for his explorations in South America. Single-handed he explored the rivers of Guiana and the northern tributaries of the Amazon. He was the first white man to cross the mountains separating Guiana from Brazil. All his life, though still young, he had been exploring; he had visited Africa, Uruguay, Paraguay and the Argentine Republic, and now his mortal remains lie in the forests bordering on the Pilcomayo, where he was leading an exploration on behalf of the Bolivian Government. He and his party were assassinated by Toba Indians, who are very jealous of whites entering their primeval fastnesses. So far, but meagre details have come to hand, and it is possible that we will never hear of the exact circumstances which accompanied his death. The world loses in him a devotee of science.
